Nexsound and The Lollipoppe Shoppe present an ethnotronic collaboration of the neo-folk group Ojra and Andrey Kiritchenko. A Tangle Of Mokohsha contains 10 tracks with songs of pagan and Chiristian origins collected during the group's ethnographic expeditions in Eastern Ukraine. The material was additionally infused with electronic sounds by Andrey Kiritchenko.These interpretations of authentic songs glister of versatile sonic palettes. Here one can distinguish ambient and electronic experiments, field-recordings of nature and bright sound of traditional instruments. This vivid piece of work has the ability to conduct the listeners imagination and to melt him/her down inside of the music.

Ojra are: Halyna Breslavets - Voice,
Natalka Dudynska - Violin,
Petro Yuha - Solilka, Hulusi, Dvoyanka, Guitar
Yurko Yefremov - Bass, Dulcimer, Drymba, Kalimba, Buhay, Bayan

Halyna Breslavets teaches Ukrainian folk singing and vocals at Kharkov's State Academy of Culture. Petro Yuha plays with Kharkov's philharmonic orchestra. Natalka Dudynska works as a musician for Kharkov's theater of musical comedy For the last 10 years the artists were collecting and researching Ukrainian folk music. Ojra are laureates and participants of many folk, jazz and rock tenders and festivals. They have collaborated with the experimental theater Yara Art-Group and La MaMa/New York.
